We live in a competitive society where winning is important and certainly matters. When we think about "winning" we think of something grandiose like the Super Bowl, an Oscar or even an election. Big wins are great, but they are also rare. We need to have realistic expectations of ourselves and others and understand that wins of any magnitude, particularly small wins can have great impact.

Jill will discuss how taking time to celebrate your company's small wins will result in more teamwork and improved results as you work towards goals. Celebrating in your personal life is just as important. She will share both work and personal experiences that she has grown and learned from.

Let's talk about how one gesture, one win can build a relationship, boost confidence and achieve goals.

This is the last LLN of 2017!
